

I am a skeptic. When the State Attorney for Indiana implemented voluntary ban on telemarketers calling my home, I said to my self that this will never work. Yet I signed up to see what, if any thing would happen. To my surprise, NOTHING HAPPENED. I mean my phone stopped ringing at all hours of the day or night. I was not interrupted during dinner, or while watching TV, or while preparing for bed. IT STOPPED.

The limitation on sales calls to private parties is a great thing. When you consider a standard for the nation, please consider Indiana's rule. It works. And it is voluntary. If someone wants to receive sales calls, let them. Give us a choice. Follow Indiana's law.
